Israel is not like Europe. It's not like the U.S.A. It's really

When you see Israel our way, you take a trip behind the headlines. You get into what's really happening and meet people who are making it happen. And you do it for $3 a day (meals and transportation included) if you're a college student. We have four different trips to take you from front-line kibbutzim to villages built on Biblical dreams . . . to introduce you to government leaders, military spokesmen and people who will rap with you about the way it really is. Each trip leaves on a different day of the week and we are running them every week beginning Sunday, June 28th No matter how you are getting to Israel, look us up when you arrive. We are at three locations: (1) In Tel Aviv at Lod Airport (next to the Government Tourist-Desk), (2) In Jerusalem at the Overseas Students Office in the planetarium building of Hebrew University (Take buses 5 & 9), (3) Tel Aviv University Student Center, Take bus 25. STOCKHOLM, July 3.—Two young Austrian players, Fritz Babsch and Peter Manhardt of Vienna, became clear favorites to win the 1970 world pair championship at the end of play here yesterday. With 100 deals remaining to be played of a scheduled 288, they were nearone of the 158 competing pairs. The two Italian physicians, William Saulino and Italo Zanasi of La Spezia, who had led substantially a day earlier, were the only pair with any immediate prospects of overtaking the

The Legend and Louis Armstrong

July 4. 1970, is Louis Armstrong's 70th birthday. In this article. Henry Pleasants, London-based music critic for the International Herald Tribune, whose latest book is "Serious Music-And All That Jazz." assesses the career of one of America's jazz greats.

By Heary Pleasants

I ONDON -Louis Armstrong, at 70, is a legend in his own time. But the fact tells us next to nothing about him. The very word legend seems to imply semi-fiction, or history distorted and inflated by fancy.

Armstrong is everything the legend holds him to be: the greatest of early jazz cornet and trum-net players, a unique and improbable vocalist; an emioerant and extrovert celebrity; a showman of genius, and an American ambassador more widely known and more warmly accepted than anyone who ever left the White House with a letter of sccreditation in his pocket.

It's all true. It's all attractive. And yet, in the end, it's all wrong. Not factually wrong, of course; but wrong because the legend is unjust to the man. Most legendary figures, being only hum in, fail to live up to the legend. The failure is commonly overlooked, or denied, because the legend, for sentimental or political reasons, is preferable to the truth. In Louis Armstrong's case, it's the other way around. The truth surpasses the legend-and challenges credulity!

It must seem not merely improbable, but sheerly impossible, that any one man could have exerted so original and so decisive an influence on the evolution of Western music, least of all en essentially unlettered black trumpet player from New Orleans. But he did. Almost everything we have heard in the past 40 years in jazz and in a great amount of popular music, short of folk and rock, derives from Armstrong.

Liberation

It was he who liberated the improvising virtuoso jazz musician, as soloist, from the tight collective improvisation of New Orleans jazz It was he who, by his own example, pushed back the technical boundaries of traditional musical Instruments And it was he who broke the stereo-typed rbythmic procedures of early Jazz. With bis incandescent introduction to "West End Blues." recorded on June 28, 1928, Armstrong, in the words of Gunther Schuller, president of the New England Conservatory of Music, in his "Early Jazz." "established the general direction of jazz for several decades to come."

The lay music lover or jazz fan. sccustomed to think of Armstrong as an amiable and brepressible entertainer, even as a venerable and lovable clown, would be astonished to learn the extent of scholarly literature devoted to his music. And no one, goodness knows, would be more astonished than Louis himself. or find it more bewildering, more utterly incomprehensible. His improvisatory explosions have been copied down measure for measure and subjected to the most painstaking melodic, harmonic and rbythmic

The significance of his innovations is implicit in the fact that none of this snalysis really works. Notation is inseparable from the European conventions it was evolved to record and represent. It cannot reflect the myriad shadings of attack. color. vibrato, release and so on that distinguish Louise playing and singing. Nor can it reproduce visually rhythmic subtleties so foreign to the fractional subdivision of units of time in the rhythmic organization of European

This is true of the music of all the great jazz masters who came after Armstrong, and it is true of a few who came before him; but it was documented more originally, more viridly and more decisively than anyone else the arrival of a musical idiom that delied assessment by traditional criteria.

Popular Music

Louis's own career after 1930 has helped to frustrate any just evaluation of his achievement. By the end of the 1920s he was already a celebrity. And the role suited both his talents and his disposition. He drifted, or was drawn, into the mainstream of popular music, playing everything and anything that came his way.

Whatever he played or sang he did in his own way. to be sure, and there is no denying that the "way" commonly transcended the "what." But he had nothing new to offer. The jazz world has never quite forgiven him, and sometimes it seems almost to have forgotten himor to have abandoned him to popular music.

. It is rarely the lot of great men to have their life's work contemplated in judiclous perspec-tive, or even to achieve perspective themselves It may be doubted that Louis fully appreciates what he has meant to music. It is all there on records, of course, including much that he cannot do today at 70.

But as long as he can put two notes together in the context of a phrase, he will place those notes and color them and bend them in a way that defies notation and snalysis, and challenges imitation. He will be telling us what he has always known better than anyone else, if only intuitively and instinctively. He will be telling us what jazz has been all about.

LONDON_ 4 Show of Wit, Poetry ByOldenburg

By Max Wykes-Joyce

CONDON. July 3.—This week in London, Class Oldenburg at the Tate Gallery, running hrough Aug. 16, wins pride of place by his wit and by his

The wit is there in the projects for the monuments, especially the colossal wingnut in the Karleplan in Stockholm, the hats blowing in a wind for a city square, and the massive concrete traffic stopper, with the names inscribed of the war dead, projected for the inter-section of Canal Street and Broadway, New York.

The poetry is in the draw-ings for the soft typewriters, and, for example, in the assemblages of scrap which Olden-burg calls "Flags"; in the muslin, plaster and enamel ("I am for the art of cheap plaster and enamel. I am for the art of worn marble and smashed slate.") "Girls Dresses Blowing in the Wind"; in the hardhinged giant saw and the soft saw hanging from the ceiling like a medieval banner, in the company of a bunch of soft riant scissors. Never again will me take the everyday object for granted, for who can depise a hamburger large enough o make love on, cigarette stubs the size of cushions, and an shtray one could paddle in?

. No one has celebrated glorious Rome, its pear browns, oranges and apricois, its glowing baroque facades: under hot summer skies, in quite the same way. No one has reduced the enormous wealth of ornaments, statues, domes and other architecture which everywhere confound the eye, to such few, quick essentials. The tawny ochres, the creamy whites, the scirocco luminosity, the teeming, broody imperial city, accented by flicks of black-green trees, either under pink heat or under purple weather, are woven into a fabric which is almost always beguiling.

But the fleecy surfaces are the same salable size. Toward the end, facile handling of some makes them potbollers, and one often longs for one single cool tone. But when they hit, as in the façades of Palazzo Madama and of St. John in Lateran. where complicated detail is converted into one umber red whole, the result is very good. Every picture reflects the city with a thick golden heaviness, an age-old cathlee sleepiness that the compoisseur can recognize and want for a souvenir par excellence.

A profusion of lights, shiny plastic materials, multiples and clicking sound greet you at this sculptors' group show. The distinctions between art, industrial design, architecture, already difficult enough to apprehend today, here merge into one blinking, disquieting environ-ment. Only Sara Campesan's white room, which is festooned with descending iridescent scrolls like apple peels, creates some magic: it would make a very pretty decor for a modern dance company.

The Art Market-Kitsch and the Avant-Garde At Sale of Russian Painting

By Souren Melikian

LONDON, July 3.—One of the most interesting sales of the season was at Sotheby's on Wednesday where, for the first time in London salesroom history, the auction was devoted entirely to Russian works from the first quarter of the 20th century. Sotheby's expert on Russian painting, Thile von Watzdorf, spent nearly a year selecting 90 paintings, drawings and watercolors from various sources. The sale was reasonably representative and some names in the catalogues are almost completely unknown for future suctions, whether in London, New York or Paris. The impression of somewhat bewildering variety is a truthful reflection of the incredible artistic turnoil Russia went through in the early 20th century. Roughly speaking, there were two major trends, one realistic and similar to the melodramatic style in favor in the West at that time. The other trend was tionary and similar to experiments being made in the

to the layman. The prices will almost certainly set the standard

Of the two trends, the more academic was a revelation to boyers. One would hardly have suspected that the official paint-ing now favored in the Soviet Union had such roots. But socialist realism at its "best" can hardly hope to compete with the painstaking compositions of Bya Repin.

Kitsch Art

Buyers were offered a Repin called "Ivan the Terrible and His Slain Son" (51 1/4 by 63 inches). A larger Repin on the same subject is in the Tretiakoff Gallery, Moscow, The emperor, sitting back on his heels, is holding the body of his son in his arms. The dim background is nondescript, a blend of dark brown, green and black, with a lurid light falling on the face of the murdered son. A scarlet trickle of blood running down his cheek is no doubt meant to dramatize the scene. In short, this is the peak of kitsch art. This did not prevent the painting from being knocked down at $4,800 to a well-known dealer. Another Bya Repin, "Girl With a Black Raven" (45 1/2 by 20 1/2 inches) is possibly even worse. Again, this in no way hampered the sale of the picture, which fetched $2,160. The fact that it had been exhibited in St. Petersburg (Leningrad in 1903 may have helped, but only slightly. It must be stressed that this portrait, harring the signature, might easily he mistaken for almost any family portrait done in the early 1900s anywhere in France or Germany. Such portraits will only rarely reach $200 at auction in Paris.

Then, there was a landscape by Isaac Levitan. "Early Morning on the River Bank" (15 1/2 by 26 inches). It lacked compositional qualities, color and draftsmanship. It was trite and would not have attracted notice without the signature. Yet it

The lesson is obvious: historical importance (both Repin and Levitan were once considered great masters in Russia) will com-mand respectable prices in the newly rediscovered field of Russian painting. This is probably partly due to curiosity, combined with the great rarity of such works in the West. While it is comparatively easy to buy works by late 19th-century English or French academic masters, the chances of getting a Repin on the Western European art market are much slighter. And Sotheby's eleverly managed to make buyers aware of this.

Ballet Art

A second lesson to be drawn from this sale is that the specialized category of bellet and opera scenery paintings-sketches in pencil and watercolor—is highly popular. The work ("led "Garden in the Moonlight" signed by Leon Bakst and Lated 1914, depicts a scene from the ballet "Les Papillons," which Sergel Diaghiley produced in 1914. Its price, $4.800, cannot be related to its pictorial quality, which can hardly be said to be impressive, but was undoubtedly due to its value to ballet fans,

A third lesson is that while the Russian brand of expressionism does not seem to find favor with buyers, the avant-garde works have considerable attraction. Paintings by the Russian expressionists, who were contemporaries of the academic painters, fetched less money than works by the latter. On the expressionist side there was an interesting Vladimir Burliuk, "The Shady Avenue" (21 1/4 by 25 inches), dated 1913, which did not exceed $240. We may assume it was bought in. A large Dya Mashkov, "Bathers" 152 by 33 mches), dated 1911, with strong yellows had more success at $2,520.

In contrast, works by the Russian avant-garde often exceeded the prices estimated by Sotheby's. The two Kasimir Malievich works sold remarkably well. Lot 63, "Two Suprematist Com-positions" (7 1/4 by 4 1/4 inches) was bought for $5,240, a very high price—about twice the estimate—for a minute essay charcoal. More surprisingly, Liubov Popova, hitle known in the West, also did well. Her interesting "Med. Vervis" (13 1/2 by 10 3/4 inches), dated 1921, went to a New York gallery for

On the whole, interest in the sale never flagged. The chairman of Sotheby's board, Peter Wilson, himself conducted the auction. New York dealers acquired many of the better works. There were also a couple of German collectors and dealers from Germany and France, Significantly, books and printed works, connected with the Russian avant-garde movements, sold for very high prices. The Futurist manifesto by Goutcharova, Mikhail Larionov, Ivan Larionov and others went for $720, twice the

Another indication of the upsurge of interest in Russian painting is the exhibition which has just opened at the Annely Juda Pine Arts, 20 Tottenham Mews (just off Googe Street). The timing of the exhibition and of Sotheby's sale seems to have been a coincidence. And this suggests that a new vogue is about

A rare bronze Benin head, described by Christie's experts as belonging to the so-called Middle Period, will be sold on July 7. Nome has been seen at auction this year and it might create a stir. New Emphasis in the Mideast

Apart from the admirable appointment of Ambassador David Bruce to head the American delegation to the Paris peace talks, Mr. Nixon offered only further elucidation on his Vietnam approach in his television "conversation" Wednesday night. While there were some intriguing hints and implications tucked among the Cambodian victory claims, we would like to set that subject aside for another time and address ourselves to his much briefer remarks on the Mideast and to what struck us as a stunning new emphasis in American policy.

From his administration's previous focus on the Arab-Israeli dispute and on ways to soften and settle it, the President turned his attention almost completely to the possibility of a Soviet-American "collision" in the region. He based his turn not on an Arab threat to Israel (though he did not discount that) but on a Soviet threat to American strategic interests, which he detailed as Moscow's move into the eastern Mediterranean. Europe's and Japan's reliance on Mideast oil, the region's physical aspect as a "gateway" and "hinge of NATO." These American interests, he said in effect, can best be protected by supporting Israel, "maintaining the (regional) balance of power." In his view this necessitates American support of Israel:

"That is why as the Soviet Union moves in to support the U.A.R., it makes it necessary for the United States to evaluate what the Soviet Union does, and once that balance of power is upset, we will do what is necessary to maintain Israel's strength vis-à-vis lts nelghbors. Not because we want Israel to be in a position to wage war, that isn't it, but because that is what will deter its neighbors from attacking lt."

Implicitly, as well as explicitly, Mr. Nixon delivered a sharp rehottal to the many Americans who had wondered whether he was so distracted by Vietnam that he could not bring his own and the country's concentration to bear on what he takes to be the more dangerous situation in a more important region, the Mideast. With this assertive and unmistakably plain statement of American purpose, the President has surely stilled those doubts. And of course, It is not only Americans but Russians and those Arabs hostile to the United States who must weigh the new administration stance. More tension doubtless lies ahead; slippage would seem to lie behind.

Mr. Nixon was surprisingly, almost gratuitously, critical of the Arabs: he called Egypt and Syria "aggressive," said some Arab states "want to drive Israel into the sea" and dismissed Palestinian commandos as "super-radicals." It is hard to imagine he would have spoken this way if he did not have reason to believe that the latest Amerlcan peace "initiative," launched just a week ago, was already foundering. As much might have been surmised from President Nasser's harsh indirect greeting of it and from his quick trip to Moscow with a high-level military delegation. But Mr. Nixon may also have thought—this is suggested by his statement that "the diplomacy is terribly difficult because Israel's neighbors have to recognize Israel's right to exist"—that the best way to bring about settlement is to convince Arabs that the alternative of defeating Israel in battle is closed to them. This is the Israeli thesis; it may now get a meaningful

The diplomatic effects apart, it seems likely that the President hy his resolution has ended the wearing and unseemly public bargaining over the supply of planes to Israel. To pile so many American chips on a foreign country and then to deny it adequate means for its self-defense is obviously out of the question, So firmly has Mr. Nixon now tied this country to support of Israel and made this the central tenet of American Mideast policy, that it appears irrelevant to discuss any more whether planes will be sold or how many or precisely

THE WASHINGTON POST.

Having drawn back from a wider confrontation in Indochina, President Nixon has taken an encouraging step toward reviving the Paris negotiations. His appointment of David K. E. Bruce to lead the United States delegation at the Paris peace talks is a useful advance.

This veteran diplomat a former envoy London, Paris and Bonn, is, as the President observed, "superbly qualifled" for the difficult task of seeking a political accommodation to end the Indochina conflict. Mr. Bruce has the stature, the experience, the intelligence and the patient skill required. Given the "great flexibility in the condoct of his talks," which the President has promised, the new chief U.S. negotiator should be able to achieve a diplomatic hreakthrough, if anybody can.

The President gave little indication of this necessary flexibility in his lengthy discourse Wednesday evening with three television network commentators. He expressed the conviction that the United States would now be negotiating from strength as a result of what he insists on regarding as a major military victory in Cambodia. He spoke of "saving 17 million people in South Vietnam from a Communist takeover" and revived the specter of falling dominoes throughout Southeast Asia if the Vietnamese Communists should prevail.

In dwelling at length on the prospects for a political settlement through elections, which are unacceptable to the Viet Cong. Mr. Nixon appeared to pull back from an earlier helpful hint that political power might be fairly apportioned through some other method.

Mr. Bruce's instructions will have to be more realistic and less demanding if his mission is to have a chance for success. As Sen. Pell of Rhode Island observed in a remarkably candid floor address the other day, none of the choices available to the United States in Southeast Asia today is pleasant

At least the President has taken a prudent step toward making any settlement more palatable by naming Mr. Bruce, a widely But with the new missiles this respected Democrat, as his chief negotiator. proved to be tragically untrue. Mr. Nixon would be further strengthened in the difficult decisions for peace that lie ahead if he would accept the efforts of members of Congress of both parties to share with him the responsibility for disengagement from Southeast Asia,

Only a diplomatic initiative of Washington aimed at liquidating the various Indochinese conflicts could have dispelled the uneasiness which the presidential decision of April 30 created even in circles close to the White House and in the State Department. But Mr. Nixon announced his intention to continue his military aid to Phnom Penh and to the various nations which are fighting or will be eager to fight in Cambodia, and the USAF will continue to intervene massively in Khmer territory. .

The military and political strategy of Washington remains basically unchanged. The fighting will go on, as well as the support of the Saigon, Phnom Penh and Vientiane governments. The South Vietnamese -and probably Thai-war effort will be financed by American taxpayers. And the United States is likely to find itself confronted with new difficulties if, as this is foreseeable, the involvement of Bangkok in the conflict revives the activity of the Thai Communist guerrillas.

Thus the analysis submitted by Mr. Nixon is not different from the view frequently restated by his predecessor, Mr. Johnson, It ascribes to Hanoi the full responsibility for the Indochinese crises, disregards the local reasons for the uprisings, euch as the weakness of the governments in power, and eludes the fundamental question of China's place in an overall settlement. . .

As frequently in the past, the White House now makes it known that new peace proposals might be transmitted to Hanol Bot it is hard to believe that Mr. Nixon privately disowns the long-term commitments which he officially made in Asia toward the capitals of anti-Communist countries.

The violence with which the North Vietnamese responded on Wednesday to his document on Cambodia permits the belief that the only dialogue now possible in Indochina is unfortunately that of arms.

PARIS-In the streets of Paris American and French flags floated together on public and private buildings as the symbol of the close union of the French and American peoples after the Great War. France as a whole seizes every opportunity to strengthen the bonds of friendship between the sister Republics; but yesterday Alsace and Lorraine, the restored provinces, stood out prominently. Their representatives came to the foot of Washington's statue in the Place d'Iéna and testified to very moment that the six members

The answer takes the form of a modified SAM-3, with electronics systems so radically improved that it really amounts to a brand new Soviet missile. The new missile has just made its ugly debut on the Suez front. In fact, considerable numbers of these new missiles have been swiftly deployed in prepared emplacements, on a line about ten miles to the west of the Suez Ca-

This was the real reason for the unprecedented loss, last Tuesday, two Israeli Phantom jets with their entire crews. The mission of the Phantoms' filers was to destroy the newly occupied SAM-2 emplace-

They were flying at altitude, in order to avoid the Soviet ack-ack guns that the Egyptians have also deployed along the canal in concentrations of extraordinary density. With the old-model SAM-2s, it was always safer to risk a missilehit at altitude than to risk being hit by ack-ack in low-level flight.

One must wait and see (and pray) while the Israelis seek a tactical-technical answer to the new Soviet missiles. Such answers are never found without men giving their lives to find them. At best, therefore, this will be a cruel business for the tiny Israell Air Force At worst, no answer to the new Soviet missiles will be found by the Israelis and this will be far more

WASHINGTON.—We have now terrible. If they cannot be destroyreceived what is pretty sure ed or defeated, these new missiles can in fact give air protection to the entire Egyptian bank of the really means the Soviet answer-to Suez Canal, With their known range of twenty miles, they are obviously deployed to do just that.

This will be a grim further stage in the process that began when Soviet pilots and Soviet SAM-3 missiles placed an effective air umbrells over the other 95 percent of Egypt's territory. Only a strip along the canal was then left as a "free zone," and this is why the Israeli Air Force has concentrated all its attacks within this narrow strip.

The strip along the canal bristles with Egyptian artillery, and it is crowded with Egyptian tanks and troops. Worse still, the Egyptians have been making desperate efforts to build fortified SAM-3 emplacements in this embattled strip. And one of the Israeli Air Force's primary missions has been to destroy these emplacements they were ready for use.

Beleaguered City

If no answer is found to these new Soviet missiles, they will also make it infinitely more costly to destroy the SAM-3 emplacements. And if the SAM-3s are ever put in, the combination of their low-altitude capability with the new missiles' high-altitude accuracy, can too easily give the Soviet-Egyptian partnership nearly complete control of the air over the Suez Canal.

To see what all this can mean, think of a little city of the old times, strongly walled, with obviously brave men to man the walls. but heavily beleaguered by numerous and cruel enemies. Remorselessly the enemies push the great battering ram forward, toward the city gates.

On the walls, the city's defenders make desperate efforts to destroy the huge shield—the "turtle shell," the Romans called it—that protects the battering ram and the men who operate it. But the shield is too strong for the city's defenders. The rending crash of the ram against the gates at length begins to resound through the little city's streets. And so that city's tale comes to its fated end.

In the present case, the "turile shell" is the air umbrella that the Soviets have been giving to Egypt by stages, beginning with the arwith Russian crews in early spring. The battering-ram, of course, is the very large Egyptian force, with great superiority in numbers, in ar-tillery and in tanks, that is deployed along the canal's Egyptian bank. And the battering ram will reach the gates, if and when control of the air over Suez passes to the Soviet-Egyptian partnership.

· Since one classical comparison has already been made, perhaps another is in order. The emperor Nero merely fiddled while Rome burned. But here we have the U.S. Senate, wholly preoccupied with fiddle-faddling about Cambodia, where this country and its allies have given the senators great offense by scoring a major military began on enlargement of the Common Market, two men with vital roles on opposite sides were asked for their estimate of the prospects. They gave the same reply: the crux will lie not at the negotiating table in Brussels but in Britain—in British public opinion.

Underneath all the flowing phrases about Europe's destiny, that is the reality on everyone's mind. For the great enterprise of expanding the European Economic Community, in membership and in function, depends ultimately on Britain, and Edward Heath's new Conservative government goes into the negotiation without solid public support.

The last British opinion poll. published in March, showed 22 percent in favor of Britain's joining the EEC and 64 percent against. And it is not just the figures. Mr. Heath knows that he has a powerful voice against entry on his right, in Enoch Powell And he may well find a large part of the Labor party objecting from his left.

Persuading Britain

The poll figures can easily be explained away. Britain was twice humiliatingly excluded by General de Gaulle, and the public could hardly be expected to show entirusissm for the market after that," After the second veto in 1967, moreover, the Labor government had to leave the propaganda field to antimarketeers playing on British suspicion of foreigners.

But the explanation does not make the fact disappear: at the President Pompidou of France put it that Britain cannot have one foot in the Common Market and one outside. France is not alone in that view.

The two viewpoints are not ir-reconcilable. They are opening ne-sotiating positions, none the worse for being tough, or realistic, as the participants characterized them. There is still an atmosphere of astonishing optimism among the existing members about the chance of success. But that, they say, depends in the end on the Heath government's convincing the great Bruish public.

Britain's Choice

Mr. Heath and his colleagues naturally want the best bargain they can get from the community. But they cannot expect the bargain to be good enough to swing British opinion alone. They will somehow have to regain the momentum of the argument internally. They will have to get the public past the illusion that life can go on as it is, comfortably, outside of Europe. On that day, Ford was bluntly informed that in a few short hours

President Nixon would veto the Hill-Burton hospital construction bill. Although Ford would have the impossible mission of trying to sustain the veto, this was the first he had heard that Mr. Nixon was even considering such action Even so, notification to Ford of the fait accompli was actually more courteous treatment than that accorded to Richardson, whose de-partment administers the Hill-Burton program, Around 5 o'clock that afternoon, an aide brought Richardson a dispatch hastily torn from a wire service ticker revealing that the President had just vetoed

Within seconds, Richardson was on the telephone to White House majordomo John Ehrlichman, informing him in cool Boston Brahmin phrases that such treatment was intolerable. Similarly, Ford also told presidential aides they absolutely must consult with the House Republican leadership on future legislative matters to avert Bungled congressional relation-ships are familiar in the Nixon administration. But the Hill-Burton veto exposed other equally chronic weaknesses: the isolation of the President, trusted staffers inexperienced in politics, and Mr. Nixon's surprising disregard for political reality.

Finch in the Dark

Not only were the House Republican leadership and HEW ignored, but the President did not even confide his ex cathedra decision to Robert Finch, who was moved from HEW to be Mr. Nixon's right-hand man in the White House. The fact is that the Budget Bureau's veto recommendation (on purely fiscal grounds) was approved by Ehrlichman and transmitted to the President through Appointments Secretary H. R. (Bob) Haldeman without any outside advice per-mitted to infringe upon this closed

Had Mr. Nixon availed himself of more poblically conscious advisers, he would have avoided. Thursday's humiliation when the House overrode the veto 279 to 98, and his own leaders were made to look like impotent simpletons, idents deplete their own power.

Mr. Nixon should have known even without the political advice he did not get that the 24-yearold Hill-Burton program—while admittedly anachronistic—is too popular for its veto to be sustained under any circumstances. Consequently, his unsuccessful veto only dangerously dilutes the President's most powerful legislative wcapon.

Thus, in this peremptory veto, Mr. Nixon was turning away from the example of President Eisenhower, who used the veto so judiciously that he tamed a heavily Democratic Congress, and for-getting President Truman, who showed the veto becomes increasingly less effective when used promiscuously. Once the Congress gets the taste of overriding, its lust

Political Antenna

That Ehrlichman, Haldeman and the Budget Bureau technocrats should have been unaware of these subtleties was not surpris-ing. What has startled Republicans on Capitol Hill is that Mr. Nixon himself failed to see the danger signal in the Hill-Burton

But Mr. Nixon's political antennae have not been receiving well in the legislative area, particularly last week. One day be-fore the Hill-Burton veto, he very nearly accepted incredible state advice that be veto the school free-milk bill again unsustainable in Congress, again without advice from Ford or other Republican On the other hand, his approval of the voting rights bill with its 18-year-old-vote rider was against the private advice of many House Republican congressmen, who in this case were consulted. They felt the veto would be popular in the South and among the legion of kid-haters and, correctly, that it could have been sustained in the House. Soon, Mr. Nixon will face another decision: whether to veto the educational money bill for the second straight year. HEW officials have warned the White House that Congress will not sustain a veto, a prediction reinforced by the overriding of the Hill-Burton veta That action signified an irreversible erosion of Mr. Nixon's authority. MODERN MEXICO!

"Mexico has enjoyed one of the highest rates of economic growth in the world in recent years," says a 1968 U.S. Commerce Department Study. Why? Because here's one of the world's most stable currencies. Because qualified experts call Mexico "the standout example of responsible government and business in Latin America." Because there's a controlled economic explosion going on in Mexico -in industry, public works, consumer goods, international trade - which has created a true "investor's market" with a yield which invites comparison anywhere in the world. Vacuum Takes the Spotlight in U.S.

By Lee Edson NEW YORK (NYT), High vacuum the environment of outer space—is now playing an increasingly important role on earth by helping so produce everything from instant freeze-dried coffee to fast computers.

According to recent U.S. industry estimates, high vacuum represents a $100-million-a-year

industry in equipment alone. High vacuum is not to be confused with the relatively low or "rough" vacuums found in vacuum cleaners and vacuum packs which produce one-half to one-tenth of the atmospheric The pressure inside a high vacuum chamber is a hundred billion times or more lower. In such an environment, scores of processes are liberated from the interference of air molecules.

taminate them, gases escape and water leaps into vapor more rapidly.

Major Change Noted The large-scale commercial harnessing of this

Products become purer because air doesn't con-contained nothingness has generated a train of consumer goodies not available before. A striking success is freeze-dried coffee, which first appeared about a year and a balf ago. General Foods and Nestle have been expanding their coffee facilities ever since the freeze-drieds were first market-tested.

The freeze-dry process was invented in the nineteen-thirties and first used during World War II to prepare large amounts of pure plasma, and penicillin which could be kept indefinitely without loss of potency. The basic process consists of freezing the substance and drawing off the water as vapor under very low pressure by means of special Other Experiments The food industry has also experimented with chicken, beefsteak and shrimp, among others. At the present time most freeze-dried foods end up on Army chow lines in Vietnam or in emergency

They involve less weight than other prepared foods and are easier to transport. The astronauts have their own manu of freezedried food for use in space where lightness really

For tropical fish fanciers, the Japanese have produced freeze-dried worms, which the fish seem to relish as much as the live variety. Outside the food line the most intriguing application of freeze drying is in taxidermy. Rolland Hower, who pioneered the process at the Smithsonian Institution in Washington, has been able to freeze-dry almost every kind of animal, from a spider to a fox. Some institutions are freeze-drying buman organs and animal specimens for use in classrooms. The new vacuum technology is by no means limited to freeze-drying. In the atomic-bomb project of World War II other kinds of vacuum solopes. In the postwar era, industry applied these remarkable systems to commercial distiland evaporation. At pumps and associated equipment improved, vectors, found its way into many other kinds of techniques were developed to separate uranium

In the multi-hillion-dollar metals industry, vacuum became a regular feature of all kinds of processing and refining. Specialty steels for the bulls of atomic submarines could not have been made effectively without special vacuum furnaces; the vacuum helps remove gases and other impurities and creates a stronger steel.

Today, more than 5 percent of the nation's steel output is processed in vacuum. Other metals, notably copper, aluminum and some exotics, when needed in pure form, are also refined in Today, almost any substance from paper to plastic can be metalized: coated with a thin metallic film on the substrate, as it is called, under high vacuum.

Products range from costume jewelry to the shimmering legs of the Apollo-12 lunar lander. The LM's legs were covered with aluminized mylar-made by depositing aluminum vapor on a well-known on Pont plastic. The total wrapping is four thousandths of an inch thick.

Optical scientists looking for glasses and lenses with special virtues have found striking answers in vacuum technology. Buildings, for instance, use coated window glass that is both transparent and heat reflective, and an aluminum-coated mirror will reflect ordinary light, but allow heat rays to slip through. Such mirrors are useful in movie projectors, where intense light could be used without burning the film. Vacuum is also one of the major keys to the success of microelectronics, the science of Lilliputtan circuitry. Thousands of circuits and their interconnections can now be vacuum-deposited in layers on a chip of silicon smaller than the bead of a thumbtack, yet capable of doing the work of a roomful of old-fashioned vacuum-tube

Space chambers for the simulation of outer space have helped engineers test different products. Conventional greases and oils would evaporate in space, so such new lubricants as molybdenum disulphide, silicones, phenylether and various dry lubricants for both long and short space missions have been developed.

Finally, vacuum technology has inspired a new generation of scientific instruments for research. Electron microscopes, one of the oldest medical users of vacuum, have been joined in recent years by such complex devices as mass spectrometers and low energy diffraction apparatus used to study cells and other small biological components in blood and tissue. . . . The current intense search for the cause of cancer has leaned heavily on instruments dependent on vacuum techniques.

INVESTMENT VEHICLE WITH NEW CONCEPT

INGROW the new investment vehicle for investors seeking maximum security coupled with growth and income.

Two goals in one investment. On the one hand, INGROW, distributes to its investors a yearly dividend of U.S. $1.60 per share (8% of the initial offering price) not subordinate to the potential growth of its share value; income resulting from INGROW's earnings on investments in debt securities.

On the other hand, INGROW, through its professional and experienced investment consultants, aims at securing growth of the investor's initial investment. Income and Growth respond to today's needs.

Since first of February, 1970. INGROW's Net Asset Value per Share has steadily increased:

February 1 — U.S. $20.98 U.S. $21.10 U.S. $21.34 March 1 April 1 May 1 — U.S. $21.65 June 1 July 4

This represents an increase of 8.9% in five months. If you want more details, write to:

BALDUR'S GATE

By Eleanor Clark. Pantheon. 367 pp. $7.96.

Reviewed by Joyce Carol Oates

T the center of this large, lively, crowded novel, by the author of Rome and a Villa" and "The Oysters of Locmariaquer," is the puzzling Baldur Blake, a sculptor, a redeemed alcoholic. a catalyst who sets in motion catastrophic social and personal events, and finally a victim. He is redeemed from a life of senseless waste by a rather naive young woman only to become so mixed up in an ill-financed realestate venture—Blake's Acres—that he turns briefly to alcohol again and is destroyed. His visionary gate winds up, in one of its experimental forms, in the town dump.

Baldur's story is told from the point of view of Eva Bucking-ham, married for seven years to Lucas Hines, a daughter of this New England town—Jordan -but a victim of her family's decline and a victim, also, of her own inescapable roman-ticism. To Eva "life was just a bad sleep." and the bulk of the novel is concerned with Eva's confusion over love. Does she truly love her handsome young husband and her son, Dickie, or does she love the illegitimate son of Baldur Blake, a Dr. Pryden, who is "famous" by Jordan standards but who has been rained by the refusal of either of his parents to claim him?

If this sounds confusing, it is: Apart from admittedly experimental novels, there are few works so jammed with people (both living and dead). events, names, dates, even od-dities of nature, as "Baldur's Gate." At times the novel pos-sesses a wonderful vitality; at other times it nearly sinks beneath the weight of its concern with marginal, eccentric characters and a New Englandish sense of folk charm.

The first chapter, for instance, is very nearly a perody of expository contortions. We are introduced, all too swiftly, to most of the main characters (both living and long dead) and the plot is off at a terrific pace before we know fully what is happening. We are planted almost simultaneously into the past of fourteen years ago, the immediate past, the present, and, by a technical quirk that Miss Clark uses persistently, intention the "future," which is roughly about 1954. (The novel's main action takes place in 1952.) The odd shifts and jumps in time sometimes point up a melodramatic scene and give the narrative a mysterious dimension, the air of something left unsaid, but at other times they are simply frustrating, for there is nothing inherently complex in this story nothing that would make necessary, or even justify, stylistic com-plexities. Baldur's date tells a good story, but it makes no profound discoveries about the nature of art (though Baldur's remarks are always interesting) or of the novel (though one of the characters pro-nounces, flatly, the death of the Eva. a young woman of 32, has suffered from a lifelong failure to integrate the parts of her soul. She is evidently a beautiful woman, once Baldur's model for his more traditional pieces of sculpture, and her restless interior consciou tells us that she is sensitive and intelligent; but her life consists of one mistake after another, an almost suicidal attachment to men whom she cannot love and who can be relied upon to hurt her. Jack Pryden, whom she apparently loves very much (or is she acting out a role?—Eva herself hardly knows), abandons her once to marry a negligible woman, and then, years later, abandons her again to marry the very same woman (whom he had divorced in the meantime). At the end of the novel Eva is alone, having been left by her husband and son, mourning Baldur, who was brought out of his obscurity by her and whose sudden death brings about the end of an era in Jordan.

Eva's relationship with Bal-dur is not clear. Nor is her trivial, rather vulgar surface being explicable in terms of her deeper, more lyric being—a problem of personality that does not seem adequately explained even by the ugliness of Eva's past ther mother's public debauchery and subsequent suicide; her handsome brother's homosexual degeneracy and death) or her present bad luck. The failure of integration of levels—past and present and future—is, perhaps, one of the themes of this riovel: the failure of the New England past to adapt itself intelligently and aesthetically to a more vigorous present and a future that, to judge from the actions of Jordan's youth, promises to be in-

in spite of many districting details, and pages of fantasy that intrude upon an already crowded narrative, "Baldor's Gate" is a solid accomplishment. One is left with unen-swered questions and with a desire to know more about its people—perhaps the highest compliment one can pay to a novelist who, after all, is no obliged to satisfy all our demands.

Mrs. Court Outlasts Hobbled Mrs. King

champion Joe Frazier said yesterday he won't fight again this year unless it is against former champion Cassius Clay. "I'm serious about this," said Frazier, who has been busy singing with his band in night-

Frazier said he was going to concentrate on making a hit record. "I'm going on my own label and I want to work at it, promote it," he said. "I fought hard to become champion, and now I'm going to work hard for a hit record. I've been working at music for three years now and I can't sit around and wait too long for a hig one." Asked if his trainer-manager, Yank Durham, and his backer. Cloverlay Corp., went along with his decision not to fight again this year, Frazier said. "I'm making the decision for a change. There is nothing they can do shout

Frazier said Durham and Cloverlay want him to fight before the first of next year. Light-heavyweight champion Bob Foster has been mentioned prominently as a possible oppo-

"Foster has a lot of guys in his class," Frazier said. "Let him fight them."

Prazier said he was recovered from the broken ankle he suffered last spring while performing a night club act in Las Vogas. Ho offered three versions of the condition of his ankle; "If you're talking fightwise Clay, the ankle is great; if you're talking about music, the ankle is still great, but if you are talking fightwise, the ankle is bad. You get what I mean?" Frazier said he has kept in shape and weighs about 218 pounds. "That's not bad for being off three months." he said.

Mazzinghi Defeats Richardson MILAN, Italy, July 3 (UPI). Sandro Mazzinghi of Italy, the former world light-middleweight champion, etopped American Harold Richardson at 1:59 of the fifth round of their scheduled 10-rounder last night. Mazzinghi dropped Richardson in the fourth and put him down in the fifth, with powerful rights to the head. Richardson was up at the count of nine, but the referee still stopped it. Richardson protested the decision but was clearly groggy from the pounding by the Italian Soth fighters had cuts opened over the eyes, Mazzinghi over the right and Richardson the left.

Mazzinghi weighed 159 pounds, 160 pounds for Richardson. In another bout on the same card, former world light-welterweight champion Sandro Lopepolo fought American Darmon Crawford 10 rounds to a draw that even drew boos and catcalls from the Italian audience. Crawford opened a cut over Lopopolo's right eye in the second round and kept up the attack throughout the bout. Lopopolo spent most of the match getting out of trouble and without point losses for official warnings for using his head the decision would have gone to Crawford. The Italian crowd whistled and booed the decision, feeling the American should have been declared the winner.

Where Success Spoils

WASHINGTON.—Despite everything you hear about the government, there still is pleuty of moncy around for projects. The only trouble is, you can't get the money if you have a plan that works. You must have one that no nne is quite sure about. vice-president of a university system in the Northeast told me sbout this the other day when Buchwald he applied for mnnes for a program to ruo summer schools for students whn needed extra help to get into college. He told me the meeting went something like

"Now Mr. Haas, from our records it appears that you're applying for a grant of $500,000 to run a summer school project for students hoping to keep up in college this fall."

"That's correct. We did it last year, and it was tremendously successful. We only had a dropout rate of 6 percent.

"Oh, dear me. Then this is not a pilot project." 't's not. We know it "No. works."

"What a shame." "What do you mean, what a shame? Well, if this were a pilot project the government would be happy to finance it. We'd he very interested in knowing what could come of it. But we can't well give money to something that's been proven, can we?

"Why the bell not?" "Mr. Haas, we're very willing

Towering Numbers

PARIS. July 3 !Reuters!. -The Eiffel Tower is still by far the most visited monument in France, and it broke its own record for the most visitors last year with 2,561,157, according to a French government report. In second place was the Chateau of Versailles, just outside Parls. which drew 1,132,800 visitors in 1969. The Louvre Museum came third, with 1,083,506.

gram, providing it's iffy. But we can't throw money away on things that work, Congress would have a fit." "I still don't understaud

"I'm trying to explain it to you. The government has no trouble getting money from Chagress for study programs. It doesn't matter how much it costs to study a program: we can get the funds. But once we ask for money for a program that has been proven successful. Cnngress will be committed tn it, and nakody wants that, do they?

"Suppose that I request the money for a study project. Could I get it then?" But you already tald me that had worked last summer. There's no sense having a study

"I'm not trying to be difficult, but this is a very important project. We are taking in people this year who are going to find it tough sledding to keep up in the fall unless they have some remedial work."

"It's not our fault that your program worked last summer, Mr. Haas. Had it failed, we would have given you a blank check to try it a different way. But we're not here to dole out taxpayers' money for programs that have succeeded. "Just the other day a superintendent of a public system in the Midwest tried a visualreading program for his state which turned into a disaster. The machines didn't work, the teachers couldn't handle them and the students lost interest after the first 5 minutes.

"Did we cut him off? We did oot, We gave him another $10 million to find out why he failed. And we're ready to pour in another $10 million if he doesn't come up with answers. The whole department is excited by the failure."

"Is there any possible way of getting the $500,000, knowing what you know about my program?

"I hardly think so, Mr. Haas. You've made a mess of things as it is. Our motto in the government is Nothing fails like suc"Some are weather-wise, some are other-wise." Benjamin Franklin, "Poor Richard's Almanac"

Mrs. Munday, Weather-Maker

m sun}$ up in the sky? As: Mrs. Doris Munday, the celebrated weather menipulator. Any fool can predict the weather. and s lot of fools do, but Mrs. Munday is unique: she makes the weather.

Remember that sudden fine spell in summer. 1966? It was Mrs. Munday who caused it. And that incredible snow storm during the August bank holiday in 63? Mrs. Munday again. It was she who enddroughts in South Africa and Australia, who brought torrential rains to India, and who stopped the rains at Aberian. She has also dispelled ing at London airport, though not nearly often enough. Wheo New York's reservoirs sank to 40 percent of capacity, it was Mrs. Munday who promised rain within 48 hours and got it even sooper. When the secretary of the columnist-peer Lord Arran modestly requested a few rays of wintry sun for her wedding. Mrs. Munday came up with glorious sunshine. What a fool I'd have looked if it had rained," she

Mrs. Munday is a pleasant, no-nonsens woman with a firm chin and short skirts who lives cosily just off Shepherd's Bush Road in London. By profession she is a hypnotherapist, and a dead serious one. "Most of us." she says, "are frauds." She came to hypnotism when she and her husband, Harry, consulted a hypnotist about their insomnia and migraines respectively. The hypnotist did nothing, but Mrs. Munday became interested. After mtense study she cured Harry (she still has insombla because she can't hypnotize

"I get people who've come to other hypnotists without results," she says. "By the time they come to me they have no money left.

"I got into the weather by accident. Patients who didn't leave on holidar would say, just as a joke, well hypnotize the weather for me. When it worked, I thought it was just a coincidence, I became known as a weather forecaster, then someone told me you're not predicting the weather, you're manipulating it-I thought he was crazy.

Confirmation of Mrs. Munday's powers came when a sudden squall off Canrey Island in Essex threatened to capsize the boat she was in. A few moments of flerce concentration and the squall stopped. She has now been doing her weather stunts. as she calls them, for four and a half years and despite an attempt at Oxford to find a rational explanation of her gift t"they tie you up to some gadget and a needle swings") she doesn't know how she does it.

"I feel completely depleted after a stunt. My husband wants me to give it up, but if I did the papers would say it's because I couldn't do it."

At first Mrs. Munday would do anything anyone would ask. "I don't any more," she says. She feels rather bitter about the press and the public. "David Prost asked me to shift the snow. I said don't be ridiculous, but I did it the following day. He said it was a "I never say after a thing's happened that I did it. I always say in advance what I'll do." Not only does the press fall to follow up Mrs. Munday's predictions, the public is ungrateful. "They ask for sun and then after a few weeks people-oh they are idiotic-stop me in the street and ask wby it hasn't rained .

"Everybody wants free samples, but nobody wants to pay. People ask for good weather for their holldays and I write back saying I'm willing to give you the weather in exchange for a fee that I'll return if I fail. They all write back saying they hadn't the money-and mind you, they were going abroad for their holidays.'

Mrs. Munday says that her stint as the

Mrs. Munday

Rainmaker of Shepherd's Bush hasn't earned her a thing; to the contrary, it costs her money to answer all the mail she gets after a stunt. "I get idiotic letters from abroad. The twits who write to me!"

Some stunts are harder than others. The August bank holiday snowstorm took about a week's work. Breaking a drought is comparatively easy. "Last year I broke a drought in the Lake Country. I brought rain to Central Australia where they hadn't had any for 11 years. Then they said it was the aborigines that did it.

Mrs. Munday is still cross with Aus tralia (for a cricket match she caused rain so the Autsralians would have to play on an unaccustomedly soggy pitch). Another peeve was Harold Wilson: once she made it rain every time he went out for a week.

She is also thoughtful and kind. She delayed the annual Canadian seal hunt with rain; first calling the celebrated animal lover Lady Dowding to make sure the rain wouldn't hurt the baby seals. The recent glorious spell of hot weather in England was caused by Mrs. Munday for the benefit of a friend who was on holiday 'Mrs. Munday's friend is now, alas back, so if it rains she'll let it).

Right now, Mrs. Munday seems fed up with showering her gifts on an ungrateful world and she is about to give up weathermaking. "Except for myself," she says, "I can always make it fine for myself."

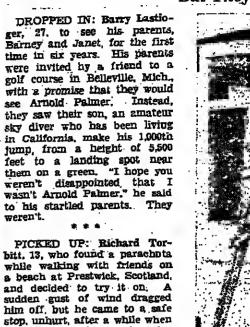

This would be a guarantee of permanent sunshine but for one thing: Mrs. Munday doesn't care much about the weather. In England where everyone talks about the weather because there is so much more of it than anywhere else, Mrs. Munday is one who does something about the weather hut doesn't talk

"There was weather before I was born, after all. I don't care about the weather. don't think people should care. "Anyway, every time I do the weather stunt something happens. Last time my washing was stolen off the line, and when I did the seal hunting I broke a
